PHENIX HOTEL,
(Corner of Main and Mulberry Streets.)
Lexington, Kentucky.

THE subscriber begs leave to inform his friends and the public generally, that he has leased this old and well known Hotel, in the city of Lexington, and that he has taken charge of the same.
The House has recently undergone a thorough renovation; the rooms are newly and neatly furnished; and still further improvements will be made to render it in all respects worthy of public patronage, and an agreeable home to those who may avail themselves of its privileges.
Intending to devote his own time and attention to the business, and to surround himself with competent assistants, together with faithful, polite and attentive servants, he gives the assurance to the public that no efforts on his part shall be wanting to make the old Phoenix in all respects worthy of its reputation in its palmy days.
Professions, however, are too easily and too frequently made to be of much value unless accompanied by corresponding acts, and he, therefore, only asks that the public may test the sincerity of his pledges by giving him a call. They will at once find him ready to minister to their comfort in the best manner in his power.

NEEDY A TRESS

LIFE PILLS AND PHENIX BITTERS.

THESE MEDICINES have now been before the public for a period of thirty years, and during that time have maintained a high character in almost every part of the globe, for their extraordinary and immediate power of restoring perfect health to persons suffering under nearly every kind of disease to which the human frame is liable.
The following are among the distressing varieties of human diseases in which the VEGETABLE LIFE MEDICINES are well known to be infallible.

Dyspepsia, by thoroughly cleansing the first and second stomachs, and creating a flow of pure, healthy bile, instead of the stale and acid kind; Flatulency, loss of appetite, Heart-Burn, Headache, Restlessness, Hiccups, Anxiety, Langour, and Melancholy, which are the general symptoms of Dyspepsia, will vanish, as a natural consequence of its cure.
Costiveness, by cleansing the whole length of the intestines with a solvent process, and without violence; all violent purges leave the bowels costive within two days.
Fever of all kinds, by restoring the blood to regular circulation, through the process of respiration in such cases, and the thorough solution of all internal obstructions in others.

The Life Medicines have been known to cure RHEUMATISM—permanently in three weeks, and Gout in half that time, by removing local inflammation from the muscles and ligaments of the joints.
Leprosy of all kinds, by freeing and strengthening the kidneys and bladder; they operate most delightfully on these important organs, and hence have ever been found a certain remedy for the worst cases of Gravel.

Also Worms, by dislodging from the turnings of the bowels the slimy matter to which these creatures adhere.
Scurvy, Ulcers, and Invertebrate Sores, by the perfect purity which these Life Medicines give to the blood, and all the humors.
Scorbutic Eruptions, and Bad Complexions, by the alterative effect upon the fluids that they produce; the morbid state of which occasions all eruptive complaints, sallow, cloudy, and other disagreeable complexions.

The use of these Pills for a very short time will effect an entire cure of Salt Rheum, and a striking improvement in the clearness of the skin. Cold, Coughs and Influenza will always be cured by one dose, or by two in the worst cases.
Piles.—The original proprietor of these Medicines was cured of Piles, of 35 years standing, by the use of the Life Medicines alone.

FEVER AND AGUE.—This scourge of the Western country, these medicines will be found a safe, speedy, and certain remedy. Other medicines leave the system subject to a return of the disease; a cure by these Medicines is permanent—try them, be satisfied, and be cured.

Bilious Fevers and Liver Complaints.—General Debility, Loss of Appetite, and Diseases of Females.—The Medicines have been used with the most beneficial results in cases of this description—King's Evil, and Scrofula, in its worst forms, yields to the mild and powerful action of these Medicines. Night Sweats, Nervous Debility, Nervous Complaints of all kinds, Palpitation of the Heart, Painters' Colic, are speedily cured.
Mercurial Diseases.—Persons whose constitutions have become impaired by the injudicious use of mercury, will find these Medicines a perfect cure, as they never fail to eradicate from the system all the effects of Mercury, infinitely sooner than the most powerful preparations of Sarsaparilla.

And then the House adjourned.

Mr. Heady's Resolutions.

The following resolutions were offered by Mr. Heady, of Bullitt, in the House of Representatives, on Wednesday, January 21, 1863, and should have been published in the proceedings of that day, but we were compelled to omit them, owing to the crowded state of our columns, viz:

Whereas, the operations of the Federal and Confederate armies in Kentucky, and the devastation of property, personal security, and happiness of her people consequent upon the rebel invasion of her territories, together with the sacrifice of many of her noblest sons, who have enriched the earth with their precious blood as water poured from the clouds, have illustrated to all thinking men the folly of disunion as a remedy for a bad administration; whereas, the President has broke faith with the Union States, which have furnished the supplies of men and money for the army, by adding new complications and issues to the war; in this, that the President, has with the concurrence of Congress, after receiving into the Federal service large quotas of troops from the border slave States, pressed upon said States, with great tenacity, the question of selling the slave property of said States for the bonds of the United States, in violation of all constitutional law, State and Federal; the President has not kept faith with the Union States, in this, that on the last day of January, 1863, he issued his proclamation, which assumes the power to give freedom to the slaves of the rebel States, in conflict with the Constitutions of the United States and of said States respectively; thus dealing a blow to the Union cause, thus attempting to change the character of the war, by associating and incorporating with the Union struggle the great and cruel wrong of abolition, an act in rebellion and contempt of allegiance to the Constitution of the United States; and whereas, the present surrounding and temper of the times indicate that no good and great results are to be attained by the war as it is proposed to be carried on, and as at present conducted by both armies—nothing accomplished but the slaughter of the brave men and youth of all the States—nothing but the ruin and bankruptcy of the nation—with nothing left for re-union but the maimed bodies of the surviving soldiers, the ashes of cities, and temples of worship—the desolate hearth-stones, and woe without number, of a bereaved and fallen nation. Therefore be it

Resolved by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, That the Legislature is ready and anxious to co-operate with the Legislatures of the other States in any effort which may be concurred in and approved by Congress for an honorable peace, based on the restoration of the Constitution and the Union, of which it is the only lawful bond and guarantee of safety, and to that end recommend the calling of a National Convention of delegates elected by the people of all the States, or such States as approve the measure, in pursuance of the acts of the Legislatures of the States, providing for the election of delegates, to meet at ——— on the ——— day of ———, 1863.

Resolved, That the Governor be requested to communicate a copy of the foregoing resolutions to the President of the United States, and to the Governors of all the States, and through them to Congress and the Legislatures respectively.

An old lawyer was giving advice to his son, who was just entering upon the practice of his father's profession: "My son," said the counselor, "if you have a case where the law is clearly on your side, but justice seems to be against you, urge upon the jury the vast importance of sustaining the law. If, on the other hand, you are in doubt about the law, but your client's case is founded on justice, insist on the necessity of doing justice, though the heavens fall." "But," asked the son, "how shall I manage a case where both law and justice are dead against me?" "In that case, my son, talk around it, talk around it."

THE COMMONWEALTH.

FRANKFORT.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 23, 1863.

We feel happy in announcing to our readers that, most probably, the Misses De Roode will favor us with one or two concerts next week. Most of our readers can but have read their praises in the many papers that have been filled with them. To such as are unacquainted with their reputation as artists we would say, that we but echo the voice of all judges in classing Miss Eugenie as the best lady pianist in America. (As Willis says, "not only the best, but so far the best that we have ever been able to reach. She is the favored singer of that appreciative, yet "hard to please" community. Her great forte lies in her very distinct pronunciation in whatever language she sings—throwing a pathos, fervor, and expression in her singing that few can equal. Due notice will be given of the exact time and place. The present notice is simply intended to give our readers an imaginative foretaste of the pleasure they may expect.

[From La Boz De Chile. (Translation.)]

General William Nelson.

Very few who live in this forgetful but novelty-loving capital of Chile, can have forgotten the bold and martial figure of a young sailor, who was our guest during the festivals of 1856 and 1857, and whom we all, more or less, have known either in the aristocratic saloons to which he had easy and brilliant access, or in the public promenades, where his magnificent and almost colossal figure attracted the gaze and admiration of the concourse. This remarkable man, then holding but the rank of a simple lieutenant in the navy, was Major General William Nelson, who has just died in his own country, in a manner as tragic as lamentable, after having displayed in the terrible struggle now rending the American Union, the most extraordinary abilities as a soldier.

Moreover, William Nelson was the brother of the Hon. Thomas Henry Nelson, the distinguished and popular Minister of the United States, who, not only in his official character, but by his courtesy as a private gentleman, has recalled among us the hearty good will acquired, wherever he went, by his unfortunate brother. It appears to us, therefore, almost a hospitable duty to consecrate a few lines to the memory of the young hero who, so inopportunistly and so deeply regretted, has fallen at the outset of a truly wonderful career.

In tracing with hasty touches this sketch, we have availed ourselves of some of the newspapers of the United States, received by the last steamer, and may be, at the same time, permitted to collect the scattered personal memories, which the tragic death of our friend has only revived.

William Nelson was born in the city of Maysville, in the central State of Kentucky, and barely reached fifteen years, when he entered the navy, being received into the naval school at Annapolis.

In 1840, for the first time, left this establishment, sailing on his first cruise as midshipman of the sloop-of-war Yorktown. On this vessel, he became for the first time, being still a mere youth, to the Pacific where he remained two or three years.

Returning to the United States in 1843, he underwent his examination at Annapolis, and was in consequence promoted to the rank of passed midshipman, in which capacity he was embarked on board the ship Raritan, which was afterwards so well known to our waters.

Young Nelson afterwards was transferred to the steamer Scourge, and on board of that vessel was present at the siege of Vera Cruz, during the Mexican war in command of a naval battery, in which service he notably distinguished himself, since which he ever made artillery his favorite study.

At the close of the war, Nelson was transferred to the Mediterranean station where he remained two or three years, returning to the United States on the steamer Mississippi, which brought the illustrious Kosuth to the shores of America. Young Nelson, who was extremely enthusiastic and kind in manner, easily won the regard of the ex-dictator of Hungary, and accompanied him in most of his travels through the North.

After a brief furlough, Nelson went at the close of 1854 to the Pacific station, where he was appointed commander of the storeship Ereclonia, anchored in the Bay of Valparaiso, as a depot of stores for the American Squadron.

To this circumstance do we owe the residence among us, for nearly three years, of Nelson, leaving at his departure imperishable memories among his friends. He was as jovial as kind—as frank in manner as distinguished in bearing; as cultivated a gentleman as he was a loyal and courteous comrade. He possessed, moreover, many social attractions, speaking perfectly five or six languages, delighting in the dance—even rendering himself famous in the national zamacueca and was deemed a decided amateur in music. One of the writers who has described his tragic death, mentions that shortly before the catastrophe, he hummed with exquisite taste a favorite air from Il Tenebre. His finer qualities were, however, dimmed by an extreme impetuosity of temper, manifested at times by strange acts, such as that which in an evil hour cost him his life.

Many are the incidents, illustrative of the character and spirit of Nelson, treasured among the many friends he left in Chile; but we cannot refrain from here recording an incident which testified his extraordinary presence of mind, no less than his herculean strength.

During his residence in Valparaiso, Nelson was accustomed to take part in the fox hunts, then greatly in fashion among the English of that port. Upon one of these occasions, the horse upon which an estimable young Chilean was mounted, fell in attempting to leap a ditch, crushing beneath him the body of his rider.

All supposed him killed, and in order to obtain the victim, or rather his remains, it was proposed to shoot the horse. Nelson objected, stating that the dying throes of the animal might extinguish the latent spark of life remaining in his rider, and proceeded at once to tie, with a stout cravat he wore, the four legs of the horse. Then making a superhuman effort, he lifted the animal sufficiently to allow the others to draw out the scarcely living rider, who thus miraculously escaped. It will be conceived that Nelson was capable of performing this prodigy of strength, when it is remembered that he was at that time, although only 33 or 34 years of age, of the weight of at least 250 pounds. At his death he weighed nearly 300.

Nelson notwithstanding his stature, was neither obese, nor was wanting in the agility or grace of an "elegant." It is true that like Henry the 8th he broke down three or four horses in a day's ride; but after a gallop at Aculeo, or to the fig groves of the Catrace, we frequently found him an elegant and tasteful gentleman in the salons, where more than once, carried away by the spontaneity of his disposition, he was seen to kneel before some lovely Chilean, to whom the dashing sailor swore a love as inconstant as the billows of his own element.

That which made Nelson most popular among us was that spirit of fun and good humor so characteristic of the Chileans, and of which the Americans of the North, so different from the circumpect English, are so willing to become pleasant abettors. Many are the amusing jokes remembered of Nelson. Upon one occasion he removed the hat of the servant in a pistol gallery at Valparaiso, by a well directed ball, paying him on the spot for the damage and the fright with a handful of coin, for he was as accurate a shot as he was a finished gentleman. During a long residence in our country, it being his favorite amusement to "chase the herds" at the annual cattle hunt.

When at the close of 1857, Lieut. Nelson returned home, he bore with him many affectionate souvenirs which he loyally required, sending frequent letters and gifts to his friends. One of the latter possesses a beautiful rifle, which he sent him from Kentucky, where, as is well known, if they do not make the finest rifles, they have at least the finest riflemen in the world, as the English found to their cost at the battle of New Orleans.

While peace reigned over the great republic Nelson filled no commission of importance, after his return home. But scarcely had the rebellion which broke out in the Spring of 1861 begun, when he was called into active service, being entrusted with the chief command of the flotilla of gunboats which was to operate along the line of the Ohio. The fame enjoyed by Nelson as an artillery officer, rendered him most appropriate for those operations, whose results have been so astonishing in favor of the Union.

From the beginning of the war the State of Kentucky, by her central situation and her resources, was destined to be the theatre of great military operations, and her brave sons to play an important part in the struggle. Two men were presented to the Government as the most appropriate to arouse the energies of that warlike and forest born race—Major Anderson, who had fired the first cannon-shot from the casemates of Fort Sumpter, against the rebels, and Lieutenant Nelson, commander of the Ohio gunboat fleet—both natives of the State and both well known to her citizens.

Anderson was first named, but his health failing, was succeeded by Nelson, in his post of agitator of the people and recruiter of volunteers. The latter consequently formed various military camps in the State, and recruiting sundry thousands of his fellow-citizens, opened the campaign against the Southern invaders, defeating them in many partial encounters, until the powerful army of Buell entered the State, destined to drive the rebels from her soil. Nelson organized his volunteers in a powerful division, which he himself commanded as Brigadier General, incorporating it in Buell's army.

At the head of this brilliant body of men Nelson, performing prodigies of personal valor, decided the bloody battle of Shiloh, in which, without his opportune arrival, the Federal troops would have perhaps suffered a most irreparable defeat. Nelson was promoted to the rank of Major General for this famous deed of arms.

In consequence of his new promotion Nelson remained commander-in-chief of the forces of the State of Kentucky, and as such commanded in person at the battle of Richmond, undertaken against his order, and in which, notwithstanding he was wounded, he retired gallantly in the face of the enemy.

His wound scarcely healed, finding Louisville, the capital of the State, threatened by an army of thirty thousand men, he hastened to its assistance, took command of the forces, displayed extraordinary energy, even to the sending out of the city all the women and children, and was preparing to take the field against the enemy, when the sad event occurred, which snatched him from life, which is known to all.

The press of the State of Kentucky, as well as that of the whole Union, is in mourning for the death of General Nelson, whom many writers call "an extraordinary man, for whom were open the most brilliant positions in the country." And it cannot be doubted—there must have been something powerful and rare in the nature of the young soldier, who, from the rank of a simple naval officer rose, in the space of a single year, to the highest military rank in his country's gift, without awakening envy or censure, in a country where the press daily thrusts against the incompetent or the favorite.

Upon the occasion of the solemn funeral ceremonies at the burial of the unfortunate Nelson, the popularity he had won was most emphatically manifested. His whole division, composed of more than twelve thousand men, escorted his coffin, and six Generals bore it upon their shoulders, and, strange to say, three of these perished four days later in the battle of Perryville, which saved Louisville, and in which Nelson would have taken so conspicuous a part.

And still more strange in this war of giants, where groups of young and brilliant Generals move from the borders of a comrade's sepulchre and march to their own—that one of these—Brigadier General Jas. S. Jackson, who also died gloriously at Perryville, should have left, in one of the Louisville papers, the epitaph of his comrade Nelson in the beautiful words, worthy of the fallen hero and of him about to fall.

They are as follows, and with them we close this hasty sketch, which we trust to be permitted to offer to the family of Mr. Nelson in Chile, as a slight palliative to their most hearty affliction: "Nelson is dead—mourn citizens of Kentucky, mourn. Your noblest son has gone from your midst. Weep, soldiers of Kentucky, weep. Your comrade in danger, your leader in battle, your beloved General, is no more—his equal you will never find again. Brave, chivalric, noble, and true, the ideal of us all, where, oh where, shall we find another, whose voice is so cheering, whose step so dauntless, whose eye so keen, and whose heart so true as that of our lost, our gallant Nelson?"

"There will be weeping o'er the land, there will be sorrow in every soldier's heart; eyes which the tears of sorrow have never washed before, will weep for Nelson; soldiers and heroes who have stood unmoved amid the din of battle, who have bent not for the shrieking shell or whistling ball, will bend their hearts in sorrow low and weep for Nelson. Who that saw his noble form at Shiloh will ever forget it? Who is it that remembers his heroism upon the plains of Richmond, when fighting for his native State, that will not weep for the fallen hero? Oh! Kentucky! what a loss is thine! Oh! soldiers! what a loss is ours.

"I have not wept before for many years, but when I think of the cruel fate that snatched my beloved General from me, I feel that tears of blood could scarcely wash my sorrow away. Earth never gave a truer friend, a braver General, or a more devoted patriot, than Major General William Nelson, of Kentucky. History will do justice to his character and to his fame, while his memory will live as long as true men breathe or soldiers bear arms."

THE GREAT FIRE AT TROY, N. Y.

The Phoenix of Hartford.

[Extracts from letters from S. L. Loomis, Esq., President of the Phoenix Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn., to R. H. & H. M. Magill, General Agents, relative to the late serious conflagration at Troy.]

PHOENIX INSURANCE COMPANY,

Hartford, Conn., May 12, 1862.

"A big fire at Troy—we are in—how much we don't know. May be $20,000; but whatever it is, it will be paid as fast as applied for, and no delay. Secretary Kellogg went up there this morning. Mr. Wallace (Adjuster) will meet him there to-morrow. They will make short work of it. The fire swept off about fifty acres of buildings—a calamity to Troy, but one no human forecast could have prevented. It is the first emergency we ever had, and such an one as gives more character to a Company than a hundred $5,000 fires."

HARTFORD, May 13, 1862.

"Our losses may reach $15,000 or $20,000, but whatever they are, they will be paid before SATURDAY NIGHT if they can be adjusted. It is such fires that try the backbone of Companies, and if they can stand under the heavy load, it will give them great credit."

S. L. LOOMIS, President.

H. WINGATE, Agent,

June 4, 1862. Frankfort, Ky.
